

Welcome to Transliteration.org, a dedicated resource aimed at making the Holy Quran accessible to people worldwide.

For Muslims, reading the Quran in its original Arabic language and understanding its profound meaning is a spiritual obligation. However, a significant portion of the global Muslim population does not have Arabic as their native language. This is where transliteration becomes an essential tool.

Transliteration of the Quran involves converting the Arabic script into Roman characters, enabling non-Arabic speakers to read the text phonetically. While most Arabic letters have corresponding Roman equivalents, there are several letters that lack an exact match in sound.

At Transliteration.org, we employ a specialized character set to accurately transliterate certain Arabic letters that do not have direct equivalents in the English script. Here are some examples:

` : Represents the Arabic letter ع (Ain).

Ş ş: Represents the Arabic letter ص (Sad).

Đ đ: Represents the Arabic letter ض (Dad).

Ṭ ṭ: Represents the Arabic letter ط (Ta).

q: Represents the Arabic letter ق (Qaf).

Ĥ ĥ: Represents the Arabic letter ح (Ha).

Ž ž: Represents the Arabic letter ظ (Za).

Gh: Represents the Arabic letter غ.

Th: Represents the Arabic letter ث.

Dh: Represents the Arabic letter ذ.

Sh: Represents the Arabic letter ش.

Kh: Represents the Arabic letter خ.

In addition to phonetic reading, it is crucial to recite the Quran with correct pronunciation and elongation of certain letters based on their position in a sentence. To assist in this aspect, we have implemented color-coding for the characters that require specific intonations. This feature facilitates accurate recitation of the Quran for our readers.

At Transliteration.org, you not only have the opportunity to read and understand the Quran through transliteration and translations, but you can also listen to the captivating recitation of the Arabic text. This feature allows you to immerse yourself in the rhythmic cadence and spiritual essence of the Quranic verses, irrespective of your proficiency in the Arabic language.

We offer the Quran in its original Arabic script, transliterated Roman characters, and translations in multiple languages, including English, French, German, Japanese, Chinese, Hindi, and more. Our primary objective is to make the sacred text of the Quran widely accessible, fostering a deeper connection and understanding of its message across linguistic barriers.

Explore our website to delve into the profound wisdom of the Quran, regardless of your linguistic background.
